The Coram-i Network

Turning shared challenges into collective solutions

Children's services are facing increasingly complex challenges

No local authority can solve placement sufficiency, digital transformation, workforce pressures and reform implementation alone.

The Coram-i Network brings together senior leaders, innovators and partners to tackle shared challenges collectively, reducing duplication and accelerating learning across the sector.

About Coram-i and the Coram Institute for Children

Coram's vision is a society where every child has the best possible chance to thrive. Through the Coram Institute for Children we bring together research, lived experience and frontline insight to drive system reform. Coram-i, the Institute's innovation and improvement arm, helps leaders tackle complex challenges through insights, innovation and cross-sector collaboration.

The Coram-i Network is responsive and adaptive to sector needs. As a sector-led partner, Coram-i is committed to remaining responsive to the evolving priorities of our subscribers and the wider children's services community. We recognise that needs, opportunities, and national direction can shift, and we may therefore adapt, pivot, and refine our programmes and support offer to ensure they continue to deliver maximum value, relevance, and impact for our subscribers and the children, young people and families they work with.

Why join the Coram-i Network?

Children's services leaders face increasing demand, workforce pressures, placement sufficiency challenges and growing expectations around digital transformation and reform. Senior leaders tell us they need:

- Trusted peers to explore complex challenges together
- Access to emerging ideas and innovation
- Insight that informs decision-making
- Opportunities to influence future priorities

Coram-i does exactly this by helping leaders learn from one another, reduce duplication, access expertise and turn shared challenges into collective solutions.
